The nursery is well provided with rhymes about parts of the body. They have rhymes to repeat when they play with the five fingers, and others when they pull the toes; rhymes when they take hold of the knee, and expect the child to keep from laughing; rhymes about the face, and so on. Here is a little rhyme that is as pleasing to the Chinese child as the little pig has always been to our children: This little cow eats grass, This little cow eats hay, This little cow drinks water, This little cow runs away, This little cow does nothing, Except lie down all day. We ll whip her. With that, the nurse or mother playfully slaps the little bare foot. In addition to his...
