The author devotes chapters to growing palms and decorative plants in the home, to table decoration and to the 1 village improvement societies. Principles and Practice of Plumbing. By J. J. Cosgrove. Published by Standard Sanitary Mfg. Co., Pittsburgh. Pa. Illustrated by line diagrams; 268 pages; price, $1.00. The book is handicapped at the outset by the source of its publication, for many will suppose that it has been written as a disguised advertisement. It is biased in no such way, however, and is in fact a remarkably exhaustive treatise of the most practical sort. In addition to an elementary description of all types of supply, drainage and ventilating apparatus, the author has brought together tables, formulae and other valuable data, all of which are based on scientific investigation and the best practice. Altogether, the work is an excellent handbook for architects, engineers and plumbers, or for any homebuilder who is ambitious enough to design his own plumbing system. The Haunters of the Silences. By Charles G. D. Roberts. Illustrated by Charles Livingston Bull. L. C. Page Co., Boston, 1907. 116 pages; price $2.00. Although he seems to have exhausted some of his best subject matter in previous volumes, Mr. Roberts s work shows no deterioration in this new collection of eighteen stories of animal life. The book will not appeal quire so widely or strongly, perhaps, as The Heart of the Ancient Wood and others of his earlier books, simply because Mr....
