By John Carbutt

Forgotten Books, United States, 2015. Paperback. Book Condition: New. 229 x 152 mm. Language: English . Brand New Book  Print on Demand .Excerpt from Biographical Sketches of the Leading Men of Chicago Art is long, but Life is short, is a proverb which, in its Latin form, Ars longa, vita brevis, has been handed down through the ages and passed from lip to lip by savans and students. But it was reserved to the men of the present century to exhibit a living faith in the apothegm, by crowding into the experience of a decade the activities of a patriarchal term of existence. Man lived, and learned, and labored in former days, and improvements in his condition were effected, but the processes were slow; human elevation was wrought out like the toilsome accretions of the coral reef, whose crest is reared up from the ocean valley only by the scarcely sensible additions of untold centuries, by myriads of laborers, whose work was but the construction of their own tomb. We of the present day can compare with them but by contrast. The progress of the past fifty years has been rather that of the force which upheaves an island...
